

Equity in Action

Moving Professionals From Concept to Practice

 July 27-28

 1-5 PM ET

 Online

 $395 Per Person

VIRTUAL PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Advancing Health Equity in Public Health Practice: Core Concepts

With the rising awareness that advancing equity is critical to public health, it can be challenging to understand what this looks like in our everyday work. It is common in discussions about health equity to hear references to using a 'health equity framework' but being unclear about how to move from concept to practice presents a barrier to advancing equity across our systems.

This workshop introduces participants to health equity core concepts, illuminating how racism, classism, and other types of oppression are root causes of health inequities. Experienced co-facilitators lead these dialogue-based, interactive sessions to explore strategies that advance equity in public health practice.

Over the Two Days, Participants Will:

- Build a shared vocabulary related to health equity and social justice core concepts
- Learn how to use a health equity framework in public health practice
- Advance meaningful dialogue about equity and oppression
- Identify opportunities to advance equity in our work and personal life

This virtual workshop provides two, 4-hour sessions that engage a small cohort through facilitated, interactive activities.

Workshop Series Developed By:

To Learn More and Register, Visit [\[ENTER SITE\]](#)

 July 27-28

 1-5 PM ET

 Online

 $395 Per Person

Workshop Series Developed By:

VIRTUAL PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Advancing Health Equity in Public Health Practice: Core Concepts

With the rising awareness that advancing equity is critical to public health, it can be challenging to understand what this looks like in our everyday work. It is common in discussions about health equity to hear references to using a 'health equity framework' but being unclear about how to move from concept to practice presents a barrier to advancing equity across our systems.

This workshop introduces participants to health equity core concepts, illuminating how racism, classism, and other types of oppression are root causes of health inequities. Experienced co-facilitators lead these dialogue-based, interactive sessions to explore strategies that advance equity in public health practice.

Over the Two Days, Participants Will:

- Build a shared vocabulary related to health equity and social justice core concepts
- Learn how to use a health equity framework in public health practice
- Advance meaningful dialogue about equity and oppression
- Identify opportunities to advance equity in our work and personal life

This virtual workshop provides two, 4-hour sessions that engage a small cohort through facilitated, interactive activities.

To Learn More and Register, Visit [\[ENTER SITE\]](#)

Equity in Action

Moving Professionals From Concept to Practice

July 27-28

1-5 PM ET

Online

$395 Per Person

VIRTUAL PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Advancing Health Equity in Public Health Practice: Core Concepts

With the rising awareness that advancing equity is critical to public health, it can be challenging to understand what this looks like in our everyday work. It is common in discussions about health equity to hear references to using a 'health equity framework' but being unclear about how to move from concept to practice presents a barrier to advancing equity across our systems.

This workshop introduces participants to health equity core concepts, illuminating how racism, classism, and other types of oppression are root causes of health inequities. Experienced co-facilitators lead these dialogue-based, interactive sessions to explore strategies that advance equity in public health practice.

Over the Two Days, Participants Will:

- Build a shared vocabulary related to health equity and social justice core concepts
- Learn how to use a health equity framework in public health practice
- Advance meaningful dialogue about equity and oppression
- Identify opportunities to advance equity in our work and personal life

This virtual workshop provides two, 4-hour sessions that engage a small cohort through facilitated, interactive activities.

Workshop Series Developed By:

To Learn More and Register, Visit [\[ENTER SITE\]](#)

 July 27-28

 1-5 PM ET

 Online

 $395 Per Person

VIRTUAL PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT

Advancing Health Equity in Public Health Practice: Core Concepts

With the rising awareness that advancing equity is critical to public health, it can be challenging to understand what this looks like in our everyday work. It is common in discussions about health equity to hear references to using a 'health equity framework' but being unclear about how to move from concept to practice presents a barrier to advancing equity across our systems.

This workshop introduces participants to health equity core concepts, illuminating how racism, classism, and other types of oppression are root causes of health inequities. Experienced co-facilitators lead these dialogue-based, interactive sessions to explore strategies that advance equity in public health practice.

Over the Two Days, Participants Will:

- Build a shared vocabulary related to health equity and social justice core concepts
- Learn how to use a health equity framework in public health practice
- Advance meaningful dialogue about equity and oppression
- Identify opportunities to advance equity in our work and personal life

This virtual workshop provides two, 4-hour sessions that engage a small cohort through facilitated, interactive activities.

Workshop Series Developed By:

To Learn More and Register, Visit [\[ENTER SITE\]](#)