Presented by doctoral candidate Jenna H. Beffel

This presentation will serve as a brief overview of parenting when you have a disability, parenting a child with a disability, and sibling relationships and experiences when one sibling has a disability.

We will touch on some of the facts about and the current status of parents with disabilities in the US.

We will also go over some warning signs of disabilities in young children and tips and tricks for parenting children with disabilities.

Lastly, we will discuss the experiences of a group that can oftentimes be overlooked when we talk about parenting and disabilities: the siblings of children with disabilities.

This talk will also include information about resources for parents and cover a range of disabilities, from autism spectrum disorder to physical disabilities.

The presentation will be active and engaging and attendees are asked to participate in some discussions as well as encouraged to ask questions!
